

Clinical Scale Elevations

Scale(s) Es
Ego Strength Scale

T-score 40-49

Elevations on the present Scale(s), taking race, gender, age, education, marital and employment status into consideration for the corresponding group's data, indicate any or all of these clinical features could be present in this person's behavior and history:

They are drawn to and rely upon others to provide the stimulation and direction they need to be productive and active. Their sense of well being and social acceptance depends in large measure upon the approval of and contact with people who have leadership abilities. They feel down and sad when they are alone with nothing to occupy them. They are not inclined to take the initiative in most instances, except in emergency situations.
